DOWN IN VIRGINNY.

Some of the Quaint Customs Observed in the Old Dominion.

"I found a peculiar custom up at Shepherdstown, W. Va., where I spent my vacation," said Fred Ernst to a Washington Post man, "which was a novelty. The people have what they call 'soups.' A 'soup' is a sort of outdoor picnic. Each person invited brings a dressed chicken. The host provides the vegetables. The chickens and vegetables are put into huge kettles holding ten to twenty gallons and cooked over open fires for several hours until the combination is reduced almost to a jelly. Pepper and other seasonings are introduced. The young folks stir the soup with long-handled iron spoons, walking around the kettle as they stir. When a girl's spoon sticks against the spoon of a young man he is bound to catch and kiss her. As you can imagine, there are a good many lively scrammages around the kettle. When the soup is done it is ladled out into plates and eaten, and it is delicious.

"The custom is an old one, and I was unable to find its origin. A company of Stonewall Jackson's command was recruited around Shepherdstown, and it still keeps up the organization. It has a reunion every year and celebrates the occasion with a grand 'soup.' A 'soup' of that company to be properly gotten up should be made of stolen chickens, but the veterans have had to give up foraging since the war, and now make a compromise with necessity by going around in squads and robbing each other's hen-roosts by a prearranged understanding.

"Colonel W. A. Morgan is the directing spirit in an agricultural fair which is held annually in Morgan's grove near Shepherdstown. A feature of the fair is a speech by some prominent man. This year General Rosser was the orator.

"Now, see here, General," said Colonel Morgan, "there are as many Union men around here as Confederates, so don't go blazing away against the North and offending these people."

"But I have my speech all written out," exclaimed General Rosser.

"Can't help it. Just talk about agriculture, if you please."

"So the hero of the Shenandoah had to bottle his hurrah speech, though he couldn't help letting a little of it out.

"There was a traveling photographer up there," continued Mr. Ernst, "who came over to take a picture of Colonel Morgan's guests. We arranged ourselves on the front steps. General Rosser took his position on the porch. A couple of colored boys came out and stood on each side of the General.

"Get out of this!" he shouted; "I don't want any dummies in a picture with me!"

"The boys shot off into the house and sneaked around into the parlor, where they stood in the windows. When the pictures were finished there was General Rosser as natural as life with a grinning colored boy in each window at his back."

Wouldn't Let Wales Kiss Her.

A friend of the St. Louis Republic's man about town has a daughter who enjoys the unique distinction of having refused a kiss to no less a personage than the Prince of Wales. It was at Nice, and the child, who is just old enough to have a mind of her own—she is about seven—was out of doors playing with some other children. The Prince came up at this moment, saw the pretty child, and asked for a kiss. "I don't kiss gentlemen," answered the baby, indignantly, as she joined her parents and told them that "that man out there wanted a kiss." The way the Prince is being snubbed by American girls, big and little, is refreshing, to say the least.

Pads of Portable Ink.

Pads of portable ink may be had at some of the stationers or dealers in such supplies in various places. The plan is of German origin, and at one time was used in this country, though this was, as well as we remember, ten or more years ago, and it may have fallen into disuse, though it certainly should be quite a boon to travelers. The portable ink can readily be made by any one by simply obtaining some aniline color of the desired tint, making a strong solution of the same in a little alcohol, immersing in the solution suitably cut strips of absorbent paper and allowing these to dry, when they will be ready for use in the manner above described.

Hansom's Sad Fate.

Mrs. Gadd—"Oh, Mr. Shirl, stop a moment; I want to speak to you. Have you been home since morning?" Mr. Shirl—"No." "Heard any thing?" "Why, no. What do you mean?" "Oh, I can't be the first to tell it; indeed, I can't. The neighbors are saying that your wife and Mr. Hansom has eloped." "Well, well! It's his own fault. I warned him to keep away from her."

To Clean White Kid Shoes.

White kid shoes can be cleaned by dipping a perfectly clean white flannel cloth in a little ammonia, and then rubbing the cloth over a cake of white soap; after doing this rub the kid gently and diligently, and the soiled places will be white again. As the flannel becomes soiled change for a clean one.
